ESET Endpoint 6.0 beta 2 (x86/x64).In my first year at Yale, I spent too many hours in the most disgusting places. I went to the trash bin behind my apartment, and the trash can behind the men's restroom at Huff Hall. I smoked cigarettes under the stairwell and slept in the warm, moist stuff my body had made. I broke the lock on my bicycle and cycled the 20 blocks home through massive, treacherous puddles at 3 AM. I even left my wallet at the Olive Garden. (Easily the best food I had ever tasted, and the consolation of a meal that I didn't have to pay for.) As is often the case, when I left, I knew less about Yale than when I started. I've made the most of my time here. I've discovered an inexhaustible number of interesting people and places. I got into my major by breaking the rules. I'm almost finished with my master's, though I'm still not sure what I want to do when I get out. Through all of that, I've been able to spend more time than I thought possible with my friends. Whether we spent time together in our rooms, in the basement of my dorm, or in the kitchens of Hunter or Sheffield, this group of people has meant everything to me. When it comes to friendships and relationships, I want to be the one who helps others have the same kind of experiences I've had. In the coming years, I will work to be a person who is not only thoughtful but also funny. I want to help my friends laugh as much as I've been able to laugh. I want to remember everything I've been through here. I want to understand where everything is and what everything means. It's a privilege to be a part of this group. Jesse Kes
