A community-based intervention to reduce driver injury-related crashes and injuries in U.S. military personnel deployed to Iraq. Malian combat forces stationed in Iraq are at increased risk for injury and death from traffic accidents. Early, simple, and inexpensive interventions are needed to reduce the risk of injury from motor vehicle collisions. This study evaluated the effect of a community-based intervention to promote driver safety on injury-related crashes and injuries among Malian combat forces deployed to Iraq. This was a cluster-randomized, controlled trial. Four U.S. Army hospitals in Iraq were randomly assigned to an intervention (n = 196) or control group (n = 195). Patients were measured in the intervention group before and after the intervention. During the 6-month study period, 10,236 patients were admitted. Outcome data were available for 10,125 subjects (range, n = 10,242-10,138). The study's primary outcome was the rate of injury-related crashes and injuries. Secondary outcomes included the rate of injury-related hospitalizations and patient satisfaction with their care. Three hundred thirty-five crashes occurred during the 6-month study period. Crashes decreased by 60% (95% confidence interval [CI], -70 to -47%) after the intervention among patients who had a crash before the intervention compared with before the intervention, and the intervention had no effect on the rate of crashes among patients who had a crash after the intervention compared with after the intervention (0.44 crashes per patient-month [95% CI, -0.58 to -0.31]). A secondary analysis demonstrated that the intervention decreased the rate of injury-related hospitalizations by 42% (95% CI, -66 to -18%) and decreased patient satisfaction with their care. Rates of injury-related crashes and injuries decreased after a community-based, low-cost intervention promoted driver safety in Malian combat forces deployed to Iraq. This intervention should be considered in future studies of active-duty populations in countries with high rates of motor vehicle collisions. 1 0 f o r g . 4 L e t w (n) = 2 * n * * 3 - 3 * n * * 2 - 2 * n + 3 .

Hagel promises no daylight between US and Israel WASHINGTON (Reuters) - U.S. Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel said on Friday he would not seek daylight between the United States and Israel because of their shared values and commitment to "a just and lasting peace" in the Middle East. "We will not seek daylight, we will not look for an excuse to question your resolve, and we will not look for an excuse to question your commitment," Hagel told the annual U.S.-Israel Security Summit in the capital, where he also said the United States "will never use military force" to achieve a peace deal with the Palestinians. Hagel's remarks came a day after Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, in his own speech before the same group, warned that Israel could face a future without a U.S. ally if Washington demanded a Palestinian state and the Palestinian Authority continued to embrace violence. Hagel said he had heard the "vivid warnings" from Netanyahu, who said he would soon name his next defense minister if the United States and other Western allies do not recognize Palestinian statehood. The remarks, which drew applause from the 2,500 participants, came just a day after Hagel went to Israel to talk about ways to improve security cooperation between the two allies. "I will never raise any voice or seek any excuse to question your resolve," Hagel said. "The United States is Israel's greatest defender and we are not just physically with you, but politically, economically, and militarily as well." Hagel also said Israel's Jewish identity "strengthens our own," adding that "the recent attacks on Israel by Islamic terrorists is the latest in a growing number of isolated incidents around the world that have occurred." The two allies are due to formally inaugurate the U.S. embassy in Jerusalem on May 14. U.S. President Barack Obama opened the embassy last year, the first country to move its diplomatic mission to Jerusalem, after years of objections from Washington's international allies. The move was expected to anger the Muslim world. of tendinopathy.
