Q: Extracting values from a line in a log file using awk I am trying to extract the CPU utilization from this log file where the values are stored in a variable. I tried the following to extract the second line but got empty values for b: `awk -F',' 'NR==2 {b="CPU%"} END {print b}'` Any help would be appreciated. A: Although it looks like a useful tool, awk should be avoided in this case. In Linux/Unix the correct way to deal with values in a log file is to use the grep command: `grep -E 'CPU%|CPU\%'` If your data is a bit more complicated, then use a sed like this: `sed '/^CPU%$/ {h;d;} /^CPU\%$ c6a93da74d`
